What your answers say

Written by Claude (Anthropic) from your answers.

Congratulations on completing this cognitive abilities assessment—it takes both time and mental effort to work through 80 questions of logical reasoning and abstract thinking, and your results are genuinely noteworthy. Your normed IQ score of 135, adjusted for your age group of 25–34, places you in the Very Superior range, corresponding to the 99th percentile. This means that among people your age, your performance on tasks involving pattern recognition, logical deduction, and abstract problem-solving exceeds that of roughly 99 out of 100 individuals. That is a remarkable result, and it's worth pausing to acknowledge the strength of thinking this reflects.

In plain terms, a score like this suggests you likely have a strong aptitude for identifying patterns, working through complex problems methodically, and grasping abstract concepts more quickly or thoroughly than most people. It's worth noting that your processing speed on this assessment was measured as slower than typical, which reduced your final score slightly (a three-point adjustment). This is a common and interesting pattern—many people who reason with great depth and precision take a bit more time to arrive at their answers, and this doesn't diminish the quality or sophistication of their thinking. It simply reflects a different cognitive rhythm, one where careful, thorough processing may be prioritized over speed.

Given these results, a few gentle suggestions might help you make the most of this strength. Consider seeking out intellectually engaging work or hobbies that allow for deep, unhurried analysis—puzzles, strategic games, research, or creative problem-solving domains often suit minds that favor thoroughness. It may also help to build in extra time for tasks that are timed or high-pressure, honoring your natural pace rather than fighting it. Finally, journaling or discussing your thought processes with others can help you recognize just how nuanced your reasoning tends to be.

Please remember that this is a screening tool designed to offer insight, not a clinical diagnosis or a definitive measure of your intelligence or worth. If you're curious to explore your cognitive profile further, or if aspects of processing speed feel relevant to daily life, a qualified psychologist or cognitive specialist can offer personalized, professional guidance. Your mind clearly has real strengths—approaching this with curiosity and self-compassion will serve you well.

For a recognised IQ

Only an assessment with a psychologist (WAIS for adults, WISC for children) gives a recognised IQ, for example for school, work or Mensa.

- This report is an estimate compared with the people who took the test on this site.
- A psychologist also looks at your whole profile, not just one number.

This report is a self-assessment tool. It does not replace an assessment by a professional. For a reliable diagnosis, see a neuropsychologist, a psychiatrist or another qualified healthcare professional.
