What your answers say

Written by Claude (Anthropic) from your answers.

Congratulations on taking the time to complete this verbal reasoning screening—self-reflection like this takes curiosity and courage, and it's a meaningful step toward understanding how your mind works. Scoring 18 out of 20, which translates to a normed score of 125, reflects a genuine strength in how you process language, reasoning, and verbal concepts. It's worth noting that there's a slight discrepancy in the summary label referencing "Superior Intelligence (IQ > 130)," while your actual normed score of 125 falls within what is generally described as the "Superior" or "High Average to Superior" range on most standardized scales. Either way, this is a wonderful result, and it's something to feel genuinely proud of.

In plain terms, this score suggests that you likely have a strong facility with verbal comprehension, vocabulary, abstract reasoning through language, and the ability to draw connections between ideas quickly and clearly. People with this kind of profile often excel at articulating complex thoughts, picking up nuance in conversations, and engaging deeply with reading, writing, or discussion-based work. It does not mean you are without challenges elsewhere, nor does it define your worth or potential in a single number—it simply highlights one dimension of your cognitive toolkit.

To build on this strength, consider seeking out environments that stretch your verbal reasoning further, such as debate clubs, writing workshops, book discussion groups, or even mentoring others in communication-heavy fields. You might also explore complementary skills like active listening or structured argumentation, which can round out your natural verbal talents. Journaling or engaging in reflective writing can be a wonderful way to channel this strength into personal growth and self-understanding.

Remember, this screening offers a snapshot, not a complete picture, and it is not a clinical diagnosis. If you're curious about what these results mean for your personal or professional development, or if you have any concerns about other areas of functioning, connecting with a licensed psychologist or neurodevelopmental specialist can offer deeper, personalized insight. You're clearly someone with real strengths to build on, and that's something worth celebrating.

For a recognised IQ

Only an assessment with a psychologist (WAIS for adults, WISC for children) gives a recognised IQ, for example for school, work or Mensa.

- This report is an estimate compared with the people who took the test on this site.
- A psychologist also looks at your whole profile, not just one number.

This report is a self-assessment tool. It does not replace an assessment by a professional. For a reliable diagnosis, see a neuropsychologist, a psychiatrist or another qualified healthcare professional.
